

End-user license agreement

The End-user license agreement(EULA) defines your rights and obligations when using this app.

Content Blocking/Reporting

Appwared LIMITED has zero tolerance for objectionable content and abusive users. If any objectionable content is found on the platform, the said content will be removed and the user responsible for the content may be permanently blocked from using the service. You expressly understand that the users of the application have the right to report content or users and each such report will trigger a human review of the content or the user within 24 hours. If you choose to block a user, the content created by this user as well as any other communication attempts, will not be displayed to you. If a user chooses to report or block you, you will no longer be able to communicate with that user and the content you create will not be visible to the user.

Termination

Your rights will be respected and you are expected to respect the rights of others. You may not upload, send or store content that violates the rights of privacy, publicity, trademark, copyright or other intellectual property rights, harasses or intimidates, defames, spams other users. You may not use the service or the contact on the services in ways that are not authorised by these terms. Nor may you help or enable anyone else in doing so.

If your account is terminated or your access to some features is limited and you no longer have the full benefits of using this app, it is your responsibility to cancel your auto-renewing subscription if applicable. If you are offered a subscription service and you bought one, you may cancel your subscription from your iTunes account settings.
